

This month's graduate student profile is that of Mr. Tyler Jollimore.

Tyler grew up in Halifax, Nova Scotia before deciding to pursue his post-secondary education at Dalhousie University in the Faculty of Agriculture where, in 2016, he received his Bachelor of Science in Agriculture. After graduation, Tyler decided to remain at Dalhousie University to complete a Master of Science degree under the tutelage of Dr. Scott White. His project with Dr. White is examining various management strategies for the control of Japanese knotweed (Fallopia japonica Houtt.). After completing his degree, Tyler wants to continue his contributions towards improved knotweed and, more generally, invasive species management and the weed science field as a whole.
